Handwritten text in a historical German script, likely a legal document or contract. The text is written in a dense, cursive hand and is organized into several paragraphs, each beginning with a large, decorative initial letter. The document is written on aged, yellowed paper and is secured by a long, narrow strip of tape or ribbon running vertically down the center, which is tied at the bottom. The text is mostly illegible due to the cursive and fading, but some words like 'Land', 'Geld', and 'Kauf' are visible. The document is held in place by four circular fasteners at the corners.
